NEW YORK TAKES LAST OF SERIES

Moyer's Weakness Loses Game for the Washington Club.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The last New York-Washington tussle of the present campaign was a free-hitting affair, New York winning by 8 to 5, with Chase's men setting the pace in binging. Before the end of the second stanza they had driven Moyer, who comes from Youngstown, Ohio, to cover, and they kept on hitting when Otey, late of the Virginia League, was substituted in his stead.

The Federalists wielded the willow in an able manner, and Manager Chase deemed it expedient to send Warhop to Quinn's relief after the sixth inning. Chase, much to the delight of the populace, and in order not to disappoint the many Giant scouts who were in the stand, inserted himself into the controversy in the sixth frame and helped put the game on ice. Chase was at bat twice, and made two hits, his sore paw not seeming to interfere at all with his wielding of the willow or with his fielding of his position.

Had McAleer kept Moyer on the rubber the Youngstown recruit might have established a record for hitting batsmen. He lingered in the pitching vineyard for one and two-thirds innings, and during that time winged three men. A grand throw to the plate by Clyde Milan in the first spasm probably then kept the Highlanders from driving Moyer to the tall timber. Clyde tried to save the newcomer in the second by getting Wolter's drive, but the ball went through him, two runs scored, and McAleer rushed Otey to the rubber. Otey wasn't any more effective than his predecessor, and only gilt-edged support saved the left-hander from Virginia from suffering the fate of the man he had relieved.

Henry Gets In Game.

John Henry, Larry McClure's old backstop, broke into the proceedings at the same time as Otey, and showed that Scout "Mike" Kahoe had made no mistake in recommending him to McAleer. The Amherst graduate turned in a tidy catch of a foul fly and pegged out the only man who tried to steal. Washington, with Street, Almsmith and Henry, now possesses three rattling good backstops.

The game bristled with brilliant features, even though the athletes took their own time about getting through with it, and the fans feared that the full nine innings could not be played.

The Nationals got a single and a double in their half of the opening inning, but failed to count, as Milan, who had contributed the one-base wallop, had been picked off first base before Cunningham's two-sacker arrived.

The Yanks got a run in their half. Moyer filled the sacks by passing Daniels and hitting Hemphill and Knight, and Gardner's rouser by hand to the lowed Daniels to score. Cree lined to centerfield for a single and Milan's throw to the plate nailed Hemphill. The Nationals died without a struggle in the second inning, and then the Yanks chased in three runs. Austin dropped a single into centerfield and advanced while Somerlott was tagging Mitchell after his slow roller along the first base line. A balk put him up another peg and he counted on Quinn's fast drive past Cunningham. Daniels was hit, Hemphill died to Schaefer, and Wolter hit to deep center for three bases, scoring Quinn and Daniels. Otey succeeded Moyer at this stage and ended the inning by fanning Knight.

Washington Team Scores.

The Nationals got their first run in the third inning. Henry was safe when Wolter dropped his pop fly after slipping, Otey fanned, and Milan scratched a single past Quinn. Knight grabbed Lelivelt's grounder and got Henry at third base, Milan reaching second. Cunningham singled past short and Milan counted. The Yanks died easy in their half, although Gardner led off with a single, and the fourth was a scoreless round. Each team scored once in the fifth inning. With one out in Washington's half Otey hit over Daniels' head for three cushions and scored on Milan's out. Gardner to Wolter. Knight's single, Gardner's sacrifice and Cree's safe wallop to right centerfield brought in the Yankee run.

The sixth was a busy inning for both teams. With one out Somerlott hit past Knight and he finished the distance on Schaefer's drive which rolled past Cree and to the fence for three sacks. Schaefer scored on Ralston's line drive to center field which Cree's fast fielding held to a single. It looked good for three cushions. New York's half Daniels' double, a hit batsman and Chase's infield hit filled the bases and Knight cleared it up with a drive to left field for two bases. Henry's single and steal and Cunningham's third hit gave the Nationals their final run in the seventh inning.

LAST OF MIDWEEK FOOTBALL GAMES

Three Big Colleges Get Into Action This Afternoon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Only three of the big colleges will get into the midweek football games. Yale, Princeton, and Pennsylvania have contests scheduled. Princeton expects the prettiest game the team has played so far this season.

The Tigers will clash with the fast Villa Nova team, and the latter are out to twist the knot in the Princeton Tiger's tail. They held the Indians to a 6-0 score last week, and, therefore, are building high hopes for this afternoon's game.

Today's are the last midweek games scheduled this season. Harvard and Cornell played their last midweek games last week, and the Cambridge team is busy getting ready for Williams on Saturday.

Besides the Princeton-Villa Nova game, today's games are: Yale-Tufts, at New Haven; Pennsylvania-Franklin Marshall, at Philadelphia; Brown-Rhode Island State, at Providence; Colgate-Alfred, Hamilton.

PLAYERS' INJURIES ARE NOT SERIOUS

Coach Coy of Yale Says Football Accidents Are Exaggerated.

Coy, of Yale, takes exception to the reports printed about the Yale players injured in the Wesleyan game. Here is what he says:

"There has not been a season in years that there have been so few injuries at the beginning of the season, and this I attribute to the new rules. The talk that is being circulated that several of our men were injured seriously in the Syracuse game, and that they would be out of the game for the rest of the season, is all foolishness."

"In many papers Merritt and Daly are reported to be badly hurt, but this is absolutely false. They are laid up with trivial injuries, and outside of the slight bruises they are in perfect condition. It is reported to be cut of the game for the remainder of the season, but his injuries have been exaggerated and he will be back on the gridiron in less than two weeks."

"Bomeister, who is also credited with being on the injured list, and who they say will not be able to don the togs any more this year, will be out for practice after a two days' rest."

ROCKVILLE TO PLAY EASTERN TODAY

ROCKVILLE, Md., Oct. 5.—The lineup of the Rockville High School football team has been decided upon, and it is thought the eleven will be strong. William Beck is manager and Marshall Darby, captain, and the line-up will be as follows: Left end, Byron White; left tackle, Otis Hicks; left guard, Fred Hays; right guard, Jacob Robertson; right tackle, William Beck; right end, Griffith Warfield; center, Edgar Smith; left halfback, B. Prescott; right halfback, Marshall Darby; fullback, Roy Warfield.

The first game will be played at the fair grounds here this afternoon, with the Eastern High School team of Washington. Games will also be played within the near future with teams representing Gonzaga College and Episcopal High School.

From the Gridiron

Unless a good start forebodes a bad end, Cornell should be decidedly in it this year.

Coach Roper, of Princeton, says Pendleton is the best broken field runner in the East.

Little Brown is giving signs already of what Penn may expect to encounter at Providence Saturday week.

The new game seems to be popular with the spectators and players alike. Until the teams have learned better how to play it the game will be loosely played. But some idea of the speed and action that will be developed is to be had from the games thus far.

DR. WIBER NAMES BALTIMORE MEN

Horiax and Gill Among Representatives of S. A. A. At New Orleans.

G. Horiax and Royal Gill, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, were this morning chosen by Dr. D. E. Wiber, president of the South Atlantic Association, to represent that body in the national championships of the Amateur Athletic Union at New Orleans on October 15.

Horiax is entered for the hop, skip, and jump, broad jump, and high jump. Gill, who is considered one of the fastest sprinters in Baltimore, is entered for the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

The Washington entries have not been selected by Dr. Wiber up to the present time, but will be officially announced tomorrow. It is understood, however, that quite a number will participate in the New Orleans meet from Washington.

The New York delegation, which numbers twenty-seven, will travel by boat and rail. Twenty of the twenty-seven will sail by steamer, at the expense of the Irish-American Athletic Club, on Saturday. The balance of the party will go via the New York Central lines on the following Thursday. For the convenience of the athletes, the management has arranged to serve special food on the train, such as is only to be had in first-class training quarters.

AUTOISTS DISCUSS COL. RANDLE'S OFFER

Committee Chosen to Investigate Proposed Change of Club Quarters.

By HARRY WARD.

A special meeting of the Automobile Club of Washington was held last night to consider a proposition to remove the club's quarters to Randle Highlands.

Every phase of the question was discussed by various members, and it was finally determined to appoint a committee of five members to confer with Col. Arthur E. Randle and to get a written agreement from him as to what he will give the club in the way of accommodations.

Colonel Randle is anxious to have the club take up its headquarters at Randle Highlands and to this end has offered to furnish the organization with a well-equipped club house, together with a thousand acres of ground. It is his intention to light the roads approaching the club house by electricity and to install shower baths, lockers, and other conveniences. A nine-hole golf course will be laid out, together with tennis courts, croquet grounds, and means for other outdoor sports.

The committee that will meet Colonel Randle is composed of President W. S. Duvall, R. E. Caverly, Charles W. Bender, W. Hamilton Smith, and L. A. Dent. Another special meeting will be held next week to receive the report of this committee.

Philadelphia's annual road race of 200 miles, which will take place next Saturday in Fairmount Park, has received a notable addition to its entry list by the nomination of the two Studebaker Dayton cars which competed in the Vanderbilt Cup race last Saturday.

The drivers will be Hugh Harding, the veteran racing pilot, and Tobin D. Hymel, the Aztec Indian, who drove the same cars in the Vanderbilt. The race will be held entirely within the city limits.

The course is a serpentine, having many sharp curves and corners which have always taxed the capabilities of the drivers to the limit and provided much spectacular work.

The course is one which suits DeHymel even better than the Vanderbilt circuit, for this intrepid Indian seems to have almost unaided control over his car, and when it was said that he made the second fastest lap in the Vanderbilt Cup race it merely indicates what may be expected of him in a race over a route that is more like a Chinese puzzle than a city driveway.

The Fairmount course is not new to Harding, since he has driven in the previous races, and has always made a creditable showing. In the Vanderbilt circuit, he kept his car going until the finish of the contest, and had it not been for a series of unavoidable circumstances in the beginning of the race he would, undoubtedly, have been nearer the end of the route when the checkered flag was flown.

Harry Grant, who won the Vanderbilt Cup race in a six-cylinder Alco car, declares he would have won by a bigger margin had it not been for a mistake in the signals. Through some kind of a mix-up he was given to understand he was in second position when the race was about half through, when he was really in sixth position. Grant says he won the race by steady driving in adherence to a preconceived plan of making each lap in from 11:15 to 11:30 minutes. He drove every lap with a maximum variation of only eighteen seconds. He changed two tires on the course besides the one at the pit, in fifteen seconds.
